Tajen Mader sits on the fence of the show pen with his hat askew during the livestock sale Saturday evening. Mader was one of the many kids who spent the evening running around, playing in the grass and climbing the fences.

Right: Neil Wolcott entered tree lilies in the open class horticulture contest. In the end, the exhibits totaled upwards of 700 items.

Below: After the sun fell and the heat faded, a group of boys kicked up a football game in the show arena while others waited for the movie night to start.

Far right: From left, Deyva Sarre, 10, and Taya Verplancke, 10, wait to meet with judges during 4-H judging on Monday.

Left: Patrick Durham, 11, strokes the comb of his Rhode Island Red hen during intermediate poultry showmanship July 30. Durham won reserve grand champion showman.

Above: Kole and Katie stroll through the animal barns on July 29 during the goat show.